BEATTIE BURIED BESIDE WIFE AT SUNRISE TODAY

Grief-Stricken Relatives and Close Friends Take
Casket to Grave.

HIS GROOMSMEN ACT AS BEARERS

Few Outsiders See Services Because of Early Hour—Many Flowers.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 26.—On the crest of a hill in Maury Cemetery, on the outskirts of South Richmond, all that was mortal of Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., was laid to rest early this morning in a grave immediately alongside that of his young wife, for whose murder last July he paid the death penalty in the electric chair in the Virginia penitentiary two days ago.

Just as the sun was rising over the slopes to the east of the city, the flower laden casket of the wife slayer was borne to a hearse by the six young men who attended the Beattie wedding as groomsmen, and who later acted as pallbearers at the funeral of the slain woman.

Father Grief-Stricken.
Immediately behind the casket walked Beattie's father, who had been bowed with grief, and by his side walked Miss Hazel Beattie, his only daughter.

Behind the father and daughter came his son, Douglas, on whose arm leaned Mrs. Ella J. Rowman, draped in deepest black, with long mourning veil that completely obscured her features. Sister of the elder Beattie's former wife, she has lived in the home for many years, during which she played the part of mother to his children.

In addition to the Rev. J. J. Fix, a few friends and close relatives completed the funeral party.
Quickly the procession made its way to the cemetery, some half mile or more away, and even more quickly was the body lowered into the grave, while the officiating minister read the brief burial service of the Presbyterian church.

Many Flowers.
So numerous were the flower offerings that an extra conveyance was necessary to get them to the cemetery. There they were placed in profusion over Beattie's newly made grave and that of his wife, an evergreen cypress placed across the head of the two graves indicating that in death they were not divided, however tragic may have been the end of each.

The two graves lie partly in the Beattie section and partly in that of R. V. Owen, father of the murdered woman, which immediately adjoins the Beattie square.

The elder Beattie, though aghast pale and with moistened eyes, bore up well during the ordeal.
David Beattie, grandfather of Paul Beattie, and first cousin of Henry's father, was among the few who accompanied the body to the grave. So early was the hour that barely a handful of curious persons found their way to the cemetery in time to witness the burial. The grave was left under police guard to prevent the theft of any of the flowers.

Fire Engine and Car Collide, Injuring Two

BUFFALO, Nov. 26.—Two firemen were hurt and a third narrowly escaped injury in a collision this morning, between a fire engine and a street car at Clinton and Cedar streets. The injured firemen are Joseph Rohmer, driver, and Patrick Collins, jumping. The third fireman escaped by jumping. The fire apparatus was wrecked. Panic occurred among the passengers in the car, but all escaped without serious injury.

Armenians Victims Of Serious Outbreak

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 26.—A serious anti-Armenian outbreak has occurred at Mardin. One Armenian was killed many wounded. The French consul has arrived from Diarbekir to insure the security of the Catholic mission.

Washington and Chicago Police Pictures of Suspect in Murder Case

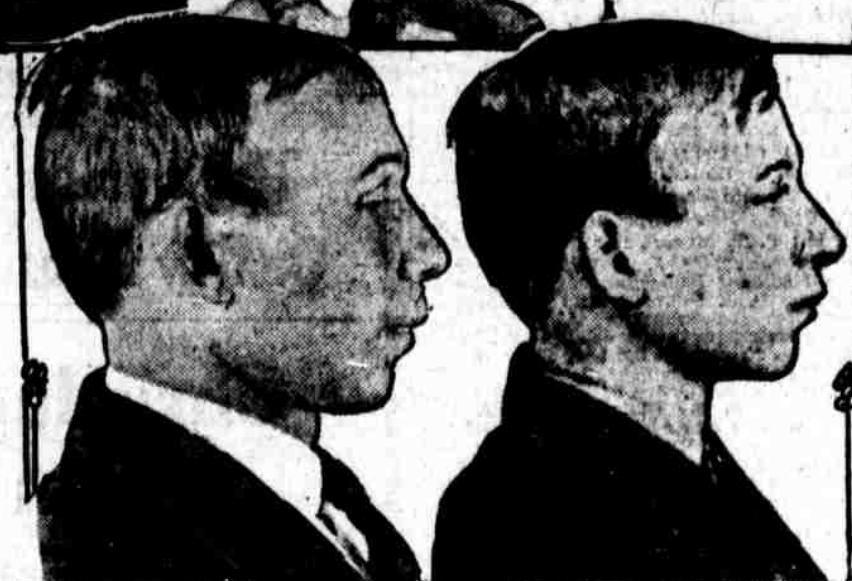

JAMES SMITH.

JOHN KABUSTA.

FINGER PRINTS OF SMITH'S RIGHT HAND.

"MISS PADDLEFOOT."

JAMES SMITH.

JOHN KABUSTA.

The Times reproduces the police pictures of James Smith and John Kabusta, on which the police of Washington and Chicago made the comparisons which convinced them that the two men are the same. The Times artist painted a hat on the front view of Kabusta. A study of the side views shows the right ear, even to the lobe, shaped almost identically. The "cow-lick" is a conspicuous mark on both. The closely-pressed, thick lips, the slightly drooping eyelids, the strong jaw, and receding chin appear alike in both views. The hunted expression of the eyes in the front views, and the slight depression on the left side of the upper lips are noticeable in both pictures.

BERNSTEIN AIDS SCHIFFS' CHARGES AGAINST HAMMOND

Hebrew Leader on Russian Passport Move, Quotes Ambassador.

Supporting the charges of Jacob Schiff, of New York, against John Hays Hammond, of financial designs in Russia, Henry Bernstein, a leader of New York Hebrews who are demanding the abrogation of the Russian passport treaty, today publishes an alleged interview with Ambassador Rockhill, at St. Petersburg.

"My friend, Hammond, now has two parties working here on the project of irrigating the trans-Caspian district for the purpose of cultivating cotton there," Ambassador Rockhill is quoted by Mr. Bernstein as saying. That the ambassador to Russia is not in favor of abrogating the treaty, because of great financial interests of American millionaires and trusts in Russia, is also asserted by Mr. Bernstein.

"Personally," Ambassador Rockhill is further quoted by Mr. Bernstein, "I can't understand why the American Jews are so keen on the passport question. It is not an important question. We need Russia. Therefore, it would not be wise to press the matter just now. We already have great interests in the American Harvester Company, the Singer Sewing Machine Company, the Equitable Life Insurance Company, and many new enterprises. Russia is favorably inclined toward American capital, and, politically, we need Russia."

Mr. Bernstein says Ambassador Rockhill's statement, given last May, indicates his opposition to the abrogation of the passport treaty, demanded by American Hebrews. He also declares it is not so dear to John Hays Hammond, that Mr. Hammond was in Russia last spring seeking special concessions, aided by the friendship of President Taft, as charged by Mr. Schiff.

MOVING VAN USED TO HAUL GAMBLERS

Whitlock Orders Lid Clamped on Toledo, and Wholesale Raids
Are Made.

TOLEDO, Nov. 26.—In accordance with Mayor Whitlock's orders that Toledo's lid should be clamped on tightly, Toledo police this morning raided all the gambling houses in the downtown district of the city, and caught scores of gamblers in their net.

The gamblers represented all classes of people, both rich and poor, and were arrested under assumed names. The police used a large moving van to haul the gamblers to the central police station.

Not satisfied with their work, the police then went after gamblers of the streets, and arrested more than a score of them. Whitlock's decision to make Toledo tight is due to the report that the gamblers and women entered out of Chicago are located here.

MORSE IS REMOVED TO ARMY HOSPITAL; FEELS ENCOURAGED

Gets First Glimpse of Outside World in Two Years.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 26.—At 6:29 o'clock this morning Charles W. Morse was taken from his bed in the hospital ward of the Federal prison and transferred to the Army Hospital at Fort McPherson, eight miles away. He made the trip in safety, and appeared encouraged by his first glimpse of the outside world in two years.

Morse was lifted by a giant prisoner from his cot and placed on the stretcher, the ambulance being driven inside the prison walls. He was forced to wear the coarse unbleached fabric furnished by the prison. An armed guard rode in the ambulance from prison to army reservation. Before leaving prison Morse was given a bath and salt water treatment, which has helped him in the past.

Covered on Stretcher.
At the post he was met by Major Baker, post surgeon, and four trained nurses sent down from Washington. Soldiers lifted him from the ambulance and carried him into the frame building, where his room is on the ground floor, and heated by old coal stoves. He was covered up on the stretcher, and no bystanders saw his face.

The armed guard sits inside the room, relieved every eight hours, while the medical patrol the reservation outside. That the distrust by officials of the seriousness of Morse's illness nearly resulted in his death last Wednesday, is the belief of those who have learned the facts. Since then he has been subjected by physicians to every test, and now they are convinced he really is a sick man.

Will See Little Girl.
Morse will see his little girl, thirteen years old, tomorrow for the first time since incarceration. His sister, Miss Jennie Morse, from Bath, Me., will bring the daughter to see her father. She did not know he was a prisoner until a short time ago.

His two sons also are coming tomorrow. Morse feels encouraged since the news came that officials would order his removal, and he now believes that he will receive a pardon before leaving the post, and will never see the inside of the prison again.

Morse is greatly grieved because his wife, who has worked so faithfully for him, is ill in New York, and cannot reach him for a week at least. Veteran army men say that never before has a convict from civil prison been sent to an army hospital.

Antwerp Seamen Out.
ANTWERP, Nov. 26.—A general seamen's strike has been declared. The men complain that the shipowners have not carried out the arrangements made in settlement of the last strike.

PLUYM IN GOTHAM TO IDENTIFY MAN HELD FOR FRAUD

"Chicago Kid" Believed Implicated in Tailor's Loss of Big Sum.

Robert Pluym, a women's tailor at 1216 Fourteenth street northwest, is in New York today to identify, if possible, a prisoner suspected of being implicated in the alleged loss by Pluym of $4,500 in a "wire-tapping" confidence game, September 21, 1910, at Baltimore.

William J. Kegan, alias the "Chicago Kid," is the suspect held in the Tombs at New York. He is said to be a notorious wire-tapper, working with a gang running bogus pool rooms.

The Washington tailor went to New York Friday night, and is expected home tonight or tomorrow. The Washington police today were not notified if Pluym has identified the prisoner.

Police over the country have made several arrests since Pluym is said to have dropped his $4,500 in a fake pool room at Baltimore, when the Roland Park track was in operation, but none was identified by the tailor.

TWO BOYS INJURED, ROOM WRECKED BY GIANT FIRECRACKER

Relic of Former Fourth of July Plays Havoc in Kuhn Home.

Two boys injured and windows and furniture wrecked in the bed room in which one of them lay sick are the results of the explosion of a giant firecracker in the house of Gustav H. Kuhn, 1221 Kenyon street northwest. Roy Kuhn, thirteen years old, and Earl Meiners, fifteen years old, are under treatment today for severe wounds sustained from the explosion.

Meiners was visiting Roy Kuhn, who is ill with tonsillitis, and Mrs. Kuhn sat in the room. Shortly after 9 o'clock Mr. Kuhn returned home with ice cream for the two boys. Mrs. Kuhn went downstairs to the kitchen, leaving the boys with their ice cream, and scarcely reached the kitchen when the explosion shook the house.

Meiners staggered down stairs followed by a cloud of smoke and rushed out of the house, running across the street to his home at 1268 Kenyon street. Mrs. Kuhn found Roy moaning in the bedroom. Dr. Dwight Smith was summoned, and carried Roy to the North-east Dispensary and Casualty Hospital, where a wound three inches long and an inch wide on his right arm and two bad bruises on the body were found to be the extent of Roy's injuries. Meiners has two severe wounds in the groin.

The explosion came from a ten-inch dynamite firecracker the boys found in a storeroom in the Kuhn house when they were in search of an attachment for an electric battery with which they were playing. Taking the firecracker into the bedroom, Meiners held it in his mouth over the gas jet, to see how near he could place it to the flame without lighting it.

The fuse of the cracker began to sputter and Earl threw it to the floor and called to Roy trying to stamp the fuse out. Roy jumped from bed to add him as the explosion came.

The report of the firecracker brought persons from as far away as Eleventh street and the neighborhood for several blocks in all directions was roused. The firecracker had been lying in the storeroom since July 4, 1909.

Bancroft Divorce Evidence From Europe

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 26.—The scene of the action in the sensational case of John Bancroft Jr., for a divorce from his wife, Madeline du Pont Bancroft on Saturday grounds and the equally sensational counter suit of the wife from her husband on similar charges, will be transferred to Munich, Germany, this week, when William F. Kurtz, commissioner appointed by the court to take testimony in Germany, will begin his work.

Alfred I. du Pont, vice president of the Du Pont Powder Company, has been aiding his daughter.

Actress Out of Work, Tries to End Life

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—With a dagger she had used in stage dances in her breast, Miss Marella La Sizilla, twenty-eight years old, was found today in her room at 249 West Forty-third street. The young woman had been out of work, and her failure to get an engagement was the cause of the attempt to commit suicide. She will recover.

BENNETT DECLARES SMITH IS MAN WHO ASSAULTED HIM

"He Met Me Down the Road; I Gave Him a Lift; I Can Identify Him for You."

SUSPECT WILL BE TAKEN TO VICTIM FOR IDENTIFICATION

"Smith assaulted me. I know what I am talking about. He hit me from behind. Smith did not get in the wagon with me when I left home. He met me down the road, and I gave him a lift. If you bring Smith here now I can identify him for you."

This clear statement was made by Morris Bennett in his bed at the Casualty Hospital this afternoon. It was made to Mrs. Bennett and in the hearing of other witnesses.

Smith will be hurried from the District jail to the hospital. Bennett is in such fine condition today that he can talk, but does not articulate well.

Dr. Jeager said this afternoon that Bennett was now beyond shock and would not be hurt by facing Smith, or any sort of an interview.

Smith will be escorted to the hospital by Captain Daley, of the Ninth precinct, and the Headquarters detectives working on the case. Dr. Jeager, resident physician at the Casualty Hospital, gave permission for anyone connected with the case to be present and interview Bennett.

Smith has furnished The Times with the name and address of a man whom he claims will prove that he (Smith) is not guilty of the Chicago crimes, though the Chicago and Washington police now believe that there can be no doubt of the identity established exclusively by The Times.

Smith also furnished The Times with several clues regarding his former associates, one of whom Smith now asserts may have guilty knowledge of the Bennett assault.

Meanwhile a detective of the Chicago police force is on his way to Washington to make formal application that Smith be surrendered to the Chicago police on the charge of murdering John Krigel and Louis Fallardane.

Smith frankly, almost eagerly, today told The Times that he passed the tobacco store of William H. Mickle about the time of the murder, and that when he lived on O street, he used to pass the store several times each day, but he emphatically denies that he ever entered the store or had ever spoken to William Mickle.

SMITH SHOWS MORE INTEREST TODAY.

James Smith, who has stoically withstood threats alternated with kindly treatment in an effort to wring from him a definite statement that will assist in positively identifying him as the assailant of Morris Bennett was rapidly recovering his senses at Casualty Hospital, and that it is expected he can soon identify Smith as his assailant. Smith smiled, appeared really pleased by the news, and said: "I certainly hope Bennett will recover. He will never identify me as the man who struck him. Bennett ought to be able to say who attacked him, but he certainly will not say that. I don't think the police say that they will make no effort to find out from Mr. Bennett whether or not Smith was his assailant. Mayor Sylvester and Captain Boardman this afternoon stated that Smith will not be taken to the hospital."

Another Witness.
Another witness has been added to the long list of those who saw Smith running, apparently, from the scene of the assault Monday morning. In an interview with Captain Daley, of the Ninth precinct, John West, son of Justice of the Peace West, on Sixty-first street, said that he saw Smith running through the woods last Monday night. West said that he saw Smith near the scene of the crime again this afternoon in the hope of digging up the money Smith is supposed to have hidden.

Yesterday afternoon the captain and his men followed Smith's supposed trail from the scene of the assault to the point where Smith is supposed to have crossed the tracks of the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis railroad. This afternoon's search will be continued from that point to the Walker home, where Smith was apprehended.

Frankie Tansil Davis, who was brought from her Virginia home to Washington as an important witness, and who was released from the District Attorney, will probably be asked to pay another visit to the police officials in this city. Some of the officers working on the case would like to question Mrs. Davis on some points not heretofore inquired into.

Welcomes Reporter.
Smith welcomed The Times reporter in the jail this afternoon and was quite willing to answer all questions. He asserted that some of those who are fore most in piling up testimony against him have reason best known to themselves for trying to fasten as much crime as they possibly can upon him. He says he has known several times that some of these men "are as crooked as the lives" and "eager to get hold of money."

"I never was in Chicago in my life, and never heard the name Kabusta. I do not care how much like me those pictures in Chicago look. They are not pictures of me."

Smith gave the name and address of a man with whom he claims he was living at the time the Chicago murders were committed, and he feels sure that this man will prove an alibi for him. The Times reporter promised that he would try to secure from this man a sworn statement as to whether Smith was living with him at the date of the murders in Chicago.

"If anyone held up Bennett for his money and got away with it, it was not I," said Smith emphatically. "I never saw very much of Bennett, but our association was always very pleasant. Whoever got away with his money had plenty of chance to hide it and I would suggest that it might be a good idea to look in piles of old lumber for it. I am expecting that whoever hid it away will soon come in claiming to have found it and claiming the reward."

"I was in the house when John Walker came to hand me over to the police for the assault. I had no sword out of the house. When I was told that the police wanted me, I went willingly for I knew I had committed no crime."

"They say now that I put John Tyrone out of the way. Why John Tyrone and I were always the best of friends, and neither of us ever spoke a cross word to the other, but I know some one else who threatened to kill Tyrone, and if I am driven too far I will tell a lot more that I know about some of those who are hounding me."

Navy Finger Print Expert Will Probably Receive $200 Reward

Reward of $200 is expected to go to J. H. Taylor, in charge of the finger print division of the Navy Department, because it was he who first identified James Smith as "John Kabusta," wanted.
